EX-SENATOR KILLED.

Former Senator Edward Ward Carmack, editor of the Tennessean, was shot and killed yesterday afternoon in Nashville, Tenn., by Robin Cooper, a son of Col. Duncan B. Cooper, Mr.
Carmack was going north on Seventh avenue and Col. Cooper and son were approaching Seventh avenue on Union street. Soon after they came in sight of one another the shooting began.
Robin Cooper, it is said, fired two shots and Senator Carmack one. Col. Duncan B. Cooper, it is said, drew a pistol, but did not fire.

Senator Carmack fell to the ground with the trio of shots, dying instantly.
Robin Cooper was shot in the right shoulder, but was not seriously hurt.
It is said that the trouble is one of the results of the recent democratic gubernatorial primary, in which Carmack was defeated. Carmack had, since he became editor of the Tennessean, been rather caustic in adversely criticizing what he called the democratic machine and had printed several editorials about Col. Cooper.

Within the last few days, it is said, Col. Cooper told Carmack that these editorial criticisms must cease. Yesterday morning another editorial reference to Col. Cooper appeared in the Tennessean and this is supposed to have been the immediate cause of the trouble.

An ambulance carried the body of Mr. Carmack to an undertaking establishment.

Young Cooper was later carried to a hospital and Col. Cooper is held at police headquarters. Robin Cooper is an attorney, 27 years old and unmarried.
Edward Carmack was born in Samner county, Tenn., November 5, 1858.
Fearlessness was the dominant note in his character. Life was for him one long strenuous battle, full of hard knocks given and taken. This is not to be attributed to a pugnacious or contentious disposition, for he fought because he had very clear ideas of what was right and wrong, and having made up his mind as to what was the right course on any question, he followed that course regardless of consequences. He was elected a member of the House of Representatives in 1897 from the Tenth district of Tennessee, but not without a hard struggle on the part of Josiah Patterson, who appeared before the House and bitterly contested the election.

Mr. Carmack's speech before the House, in which the republicans constituted a large majority, had much to do with his victory over the contestant. He asserted his rights and demanded them.

From the House Mr. Carmack was sent to the senate. There he ruggedly opposed the aquisition of the Philippines as unwarranted and fraught with danger. The declarations of the late President McKinley were at that time invoked by a senator favoring the taking of the Philippines.

"Undoubtedly," Senator Carmack replied to his interrupter, "what President McKinley proposed was 'benevolent assimilation,' but the present policy is 'malevolent dissimulation.'"

Senator Carmack opposed the acceptance of the canal zone from the newly created Republic of Panama. He supported President Roosevelt in his summary discharge of the negro troops for siding at Brownsville, though in the debate he said:

President Roosevelt must fight the course; and I say to senators upon the other side of the chamber, you must take your alternative—you must either renominate Theodore Roosevelt or you must give us back our platform. [Laughter.] In your hearts you are longing for the time to come when you can cast off this Rooseveltian incubus.

In March, 1907, Senator Carmack's senatorial term ended. In a hot contest for re-election he was defeated by "Fiddling Bob" Taylor. Baten for the senate, Carmack turned to his state and opposed himself to his old congressional enemy, Josiah Patterson, for the gubernatorial nomination. He strenuously supported the temperance cause and fought for the nomination on that ground. Patterson, with the organization back of him, won the contest and the election.

says Mrs. Wm. H. Sirig, No. 41 Fifth st. Wheeling, W. Va. "Last winter she had a severe spell and a terrible cough, but I cured her with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy without the aid of a doctor, and my little boy has been prevented many times from having the croup by the timely use of this syrup.

No false pretense has marked the career of Ely's Cream Balm. Being entirely harmless, it is not responsible like the catarrh snuffs and powders for minds shattered by cocaine. The great virtue of Ely's Cream Balm is that it speedily and completely restores nasal catarrh and hay fever. Back of this statement is the testimony of thousands and a reputation of many years' success. All
